Packed with authentic duduk samples, this library offers a unique way to compose with this strange instrument from Turkey. Instruments Description After the introduction of sound samples for the first time on the iPod with the 'Sample Room', it was time to bring some order to the world of samples and ensure that they are easily accessible for everyone. This is what we have developed with 'Sample Room 2'. It is designed to be your very own tool for sampling and production. The new version is a complete music sample and production software, with the latest features for creating your own customized production. With it you can record the sounds on your computer and quickly translate them to MIDI in real-time and see the results on your iPad. With the help of 'Sample Room 2', composing soundtracks, creating mashups, and remixing will be easier than ever before. With all the power of a professional composer's software, 'Sample Room 2' has the ease of use of an intuitive suite of tools. Duduk is an old Turkish instrument, which makes it unique. This woodwind instrument sounds haunting, mysterious, full of pathos. The duduk was one of the most important instruments during the Ottoman period. It has a total of 36 playable notes. It was used by the Turkish aristocracy in all forms of music; it was the most important instrument in the Ottoman court. The duduk comes from the woodwind family. According to its origin it is a modification of the clarinet. All of these instruments have the same basic shape, the same length and diameter, and similar materials. They also share similar lengths of reeds. Although they are not very similar in terms of size, they are not dissimilar in terms of their functions. The duduk is an instrument of a more complicated structure and mechanism than the clarinet and saxophone, and plays a different kind of note than the oboe or clarinet. Duduk sounds great, but it is often used in settings where it is difficult to play. That is why it is such a precious instrument for today's composers. It is especially in places where it would be impossible to have the duduk played by a musician. That is why today, it is used in the production of soundtracks for video games. There are many producers who believe that the duduk is the most suitable instrument for video game 82157476af
